Building Skills Series

Building Cultural Awareness in Business

To compete in our global marketplace, one must understand the values and beliefs of various consumers. Culture is learned, defines our reality, and is so ingrained that we don't notice it. It determines the way we think, behave, and communicate. In order to develop cultural awareness, we must learn about other cultures and look at the world through different perspectives. Misunderstandings arise when we try to put our values on other cultures. Learn how other cultures are reflected in the business world.
