

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Scottsbluff/Sidney/Alliance

AA.4510 (61-65 Credits)

Political science courses focus on the processes by which societies make decisions affecting the lives of their citizens. Among the questions raised by political science are these: Who has power; how is it acquired; and how is it used? What produces stability, and what produces change in societies? What is political leadership and what forces shape the relations between leaders and the led? How do societies through their governments attempt to deal with basic problems? Political science offers students both a grasp of the various answers that have been provided for these questions and a sophisticated sense of how to choose among these answers.

Objectives

- Since a core of central questions is common to virtually all the departments' courses, students of political science are expected to begin with the introductory courses in which these questions are pointedly raised. These courses provide the necessary background for further work in the various fields of the discipline: American politics, comparative politics, international politics, political philosophy, and political behavior methods.

Notes

- Students who plan to transfer to a four-year college/university should consult their faculty advisor and the Transfer Advisor early in their WNCN enrollment to determine their curriculum.
- If the transferring institution does not require foreign language, the student may take other social science or elective courses.
- Humanities electives can be taken from art, literature, music, philosophy, theater and humanities.
- Social Science electives can be taken from Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology or Social Science courses.
